FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Register for Landscape Workshop Showcasing Small Space Gardening on April 8

Want to try your hand at gardening but don't have much space? It's okay! Learn how to start your garden in a small space. Be creative and add vegetables and lush greenery to your patio. Join our FREE virtual landscape and gardening workshop, Small Space Gardening, on Sat., April 8, at 9 a.m.

The class will demonstrate ways to grow vegetables, fruit, and flowers in small patches of soil and containers. Register to learn from our expert teacher, Stephen Williams, a professor and horticulturist, about why growing your own edible garden is doable and water-wise.

" Oftentimes, people without a traditional yard feel that they can't have a garden," Tim Wheeler, owner and head instructor of The Wheeler Company, said. "Balconies, patios, and micro yards are all viable gardens."

Attendees can expect the class to last about two hours. The gardening classes are free, but attendees must register before the event.
